4 - 6 May 2017 | Bonn, Germany

Resilient Cities January Update

27 January 2017

Registration for Resilient Cities 2017 is now open!

Join the congress and discuss about hot topics in urban resilience and adaptation to climate change, including:

- · How cities prepare and respond to climaterelated health risks, forced migration and loss and damage;
- · Ways to finance resilience through direct access funding and risk transfer and insurance mechanisms;
- · Effecting global change through local-level implementation of SDG11 and the Sendai Framework.

Register for Resilient Cities 2017 before March 10th to benefit from reduced early bird fees

Showcase your work!

Resilient Cities 2017 provides a unique opportunity for cities, organizations, business, and academic institutions to present their projects to an international and multidisciplinary audience. Seize the opportunity to showcase your work as an exhibitor and receive high visibility to your adaptation work.

Other partnership opportunities include:

- Sponsoring a congress session or side event:
- · Hosting a forum or training session;
- Holding your annual meeting at Resilient Cities.

ICLEI joins forces with UNEP FI PSI to enhance urban resilience and sustainability efforts

UNEP PSI, the largest collaborative initiative between the United Nations and the insurance industry, and ICLEI, the leading global network of more than 1,500 cities, towns and regions, joined forces to create the largest collaboration between the insurance industry and cities. In December 2016, ICLEI signed the Principles for Sustainable Insurance and became a PSI supporting institution.

Introducing resiliencetools.org

A new comprehensive platform was launched by the Cities Alliance Joint Work Programme for Resilient Cities to help cities find information and resources on enhancing their resilience. The tools and resources on www.resiliencetools.org have been compiled and produced by over 20 organizations to simplify the process for local governments to find, compare and utilize the array of available tools and diagnostics.
