Resilient Cities September Special Update

Resilient Cities 2018 Call for Contributions now open!

The call for contributions for the 2018 congress is now open and welcomes proposals for various formats, including presentations, panels, workshops, and debates. An overview of the formats is available here.

A core objective of the Resilient Cities congress series is to serve as the global resilience implementation forum. To advance this goal Resilient Cities 2018 will explore a recurring topic throughout the various themes:

- Stocktaking: Reviewing the state of urban resilience and local implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (cross-cutting theme);

Additionally, submissions on the following themes are particularly encouraged:

- Social cohesion: Building resilient urban societies;
- Resilient and resource efficient cities: Transition toward a circular economy;
- Reinventing business as usual: Private sector engagement in resilience building.

Congress themes also include current and pressing issues such as ecosystem-based adaptation, managing climate-related health risks, data and ICT resilience, and evidence-based adaptation planning. Check the detailed list of new themes here.

Don't miss the chance to shape the program of this global event on urban resilience! Submit your contribution until November 1, 2017.
